

OWTS. This pending rule/law will place an undue burden on buyers and sellers of real estate alike. As it is, on the transfer of a home with a septic type system the seller must have the tank pumped and inspected for soundness. If memory serves, if the tank is substandard it must be replaced with an up to code tank or repaired to meet requirements.

What is the percentage of "tanks" leaching "and fouling ground water?

Should the repairs have a monetary limit as to not produce an undue economic hardship..?

More input should be derived from the public and experts alike. The "industry" should play NO role in the Decision as to the conflict of interest it poses.

Sincerely

Rick SCHRIVER

Elk Grove, CA

3 acre septic home owner